4. Teaching portfolio

Teaching philosophy: I consider it a privilege to collaborate with committed, critical and intelligent young people and to accompany them in their learning processes. Teaching and learning theory gives us some ideas about how to make learning processes particularly effective. I consider a student-centred and problem-based learning approach to be particularly appropriate for learning about rural socio-ecological systems, such as landscapes or agro-food systems. Problem-based learning combines real-life problems and opportunities with scientific theories and research findings. It provides many opportunities for interaction between students, teachers and guests (stakeholders or representatives of administration and planning) and continuous feedback on the learning process. It promotes the development of a range of skills, such as teamwork, peer teaching and the ability to explain something to others, interpretation of data and information, reflection on individual learning processes, and inter- and transdisciplinary competences.

Teaching strategy: As a teacher I see myself as a facilitator who inspires students to adopt new perspectives on rural development and socio-ecological change by reflecting on development and planning theories and to apply and test social science, inter- and transdisciplinary methods. I want to support them in generating new knowledge themselves, accessing a wide variety of information sources, evaluating them critically and integrating new knowledge into their existing knowledge. For me, university teaching is a social learning process that also involves me as a teacher. By continuously experimenting with new teaching formats, I try to improve the learning situation for the students and myself. I want to enable students to deal with wicked problems and tensions, such as those between untouched nature and cultural landscapes, identity and international migration, conservation and transformation, global and local, or urban and rural. The controversial nature of many socio-ecological issues requires deliberative and social skills, as well as an examination of the question of what kind of socio-ecological system (cultural landscape, food system) different stakeholder groups want. Graduates should be able to interact and negotiate on an equal footing with a range of stakeholders and experts from diverse disciplines. For me, university teaching in the context of socio-ecological systems should above all support students in reflecting on questions of “why”, which I consider just as important as those of “how” and “what”. Supporting students in this learning process is the central motivation of my work.

Teaching activities: I have teaching experience from three universities and diverse study programmes:

- BOKU (since 2001): Umwelt- und Bioressourcenmanagement (BA and MA), Agrar- und Ernährungswirtschaft (MA), International Master Programme Natural Resources Management and Ecological Engineering (MA), Double Degree Programme Renewable Resources (MA), Landschaftsplanung und Landschaftsarchitektur (MA), Water Management/Environment. Engineering (MA), Stoffliche und energetische Nutzung nachwachsender Rohstoffe (MA), Sustainability in Agriculture, Food Production and Food Technology in the Danube Region (MA) as well as the two doctoral study programmes of the BOKU: Doctorate in Social and Economics Sciences, Doctorate in Agricultural Sciences
- University of Klagenfurt (2008-2010): MSc Programme Management of Protected Areas
- Free University of Bozen/Bolzano (2002-2008): BA of Agricultural technology and economics

I have held the following courses at all levels from Bachelor, to Master and PhD Programmes

Course title	Years	University	Type
Rural Development (guests from LEADER regions, Stadt-Umland-Management, Biosphere Reserves)	Since 2019	BOKU	VO
Regionalplanung	2018/19	BOKU	VO/I
Sozio-kulturelle Aspekte der Regionalentwicklung (guests such as Teresia Oedl Wieser on women in LEADER Local Action Groups)	2019-2021	BOKU	VO
Agro-Food Studies (guests, e.g. Sezionieri on migratory farm workers, MILA a cooperative supermarket, Viennese Food Policy Council)	Since 2018	BOKU	VO/B
Institutional Innovation and Sustainability Transition (guests: Perspektive Landwirtschaft, on inclusive access to farm land (extra-family farm succession), co-working spaces Otelo, fair trade programme, coffee roasters)	Since 2018	BOKU	VU/B/I
Bachelorseminar Umwelt- und Bioressourcenmanagement (z.B. Lokale Agenda 21, Volunteers' engagement in protected areas or landscape stewardship associations)	2014/15	BOKU	SE/I

Course title	Years	University	Type
Fachseminar Regionale Entwicklung (Gäste, e.g., Andreas Hacker – Stadt-Umland-Management, C. Diery Biosphärenpark-Management) (Seminar Regional Development)	Since 2011	BOKU	SE/I
Einführung in das Umwelt- und Bioressourcenmanagement (Introduction to the Management of Environment and Bio-Resources) (Guests: graduates sharing their professional work experiences)	Since 2011	BOKU	VO/I
Interdisziplinäre Ansätze und Methoden (Interdisciplinary Approaches and Methods)	Since 2020 2010-2019	BOKU	VU/I VO/B/I

dokNE Kollegseminar Zukunftsforum Nachhaltige Entwicklung	2007-2009	BOKU	SE/I
Interdisziplinäres Projekt Umwelt- und Biosressourcenmanagement (coordination and teaching with >10 other lecturers) (diverse projects in local communities, rural regions)	2008-2009	BOKU	IP
Entwicklungs- und Regionalmanagement (guests such as LEADER groups, Nature Parks)	2006-2018	BOKU	VO/B/I
Entwicklungs- und Regionalmanagement (projects with rural communities)	2006-2013	BOKU	SE/I
Regional Economics	2001-2009	BOKU	VO
Interdisziplinäre Projektstudie Lebensraum und Qualität (diverse transdisciplinary projects at the interface between nature conservatoin and rural development)	2005-2007	BOKU	IP
Interdisziplinäre Projekt-LVA: Ökonomik; Projekt: Ökologische Landwirtschaft und regionale Entwicklung	2004-2005	BOKU	IP
Interdisziplinäres Projekt Ökonomik/Regionalmarketing	2001-2002	BOKU	IP
Landwirtschaftliche Regionalplanung	2001-2004	BOKU	SE

(VO – lecture, SE – seminar, IP interdisciplinary project, VU lecture with lab, I interdisciplinary and/ or transdisciplinary co-teaching, B blended learning)

Introductory courses in Bachelor programmes: Coordinated by Dr. Schauppenlehner-Kloyber, our teaching team received the BOKU Teaching Award 2022 for “Introduction to Management of Environment and Bio-Resources”, the first introductory course for several hundred first-year students. I coordinated the lecture “Interdisciplinary Methods and Approaches” as a blended learning course involving colleagues from RALI and DNAS departments from 2010 to 2018. We had hundreds of students in each course. The combination of e-learning and face-to-face teaching helped us to organise this large lecture and to experiment with digital tools even before the COVID-pandemic. Due to budget restrictions (no funding of sub-groups for lectures), we could only offer a group of 50 students additional voluntary face-to-face hours for applying the inter- and transdisciplinary methods on top of the otherwise mostly theoretical e-learning classes. As a result of student lobbying, the format was changed from a lecture to a combination of lecture and lab in 2019. We had to involve a dozen of colleagues who could provide group sessions to experiment with various participatory methods of knowledge integration. Dr. Schauppenlehner-Kloyber (senior lecturer) took over in 2019 and is doing a great job in coordinating this ambitious format.

Problem-oriented lectures and interactive seminars in diverse Master programmes: I support my lectures with case studies, role plays, group reviews and speed dating sessions to cater for students' short attention spans and increase their long-term learning success. Several lectures are organised in a blended learning mode, combining digitally supported self-study with intensive face-to-face interaction, as well as individual and group reflections. I accompany my seminars with peer interaction to better support students in writing and presenting their seminar papers or Master's theses. This oral or written feedback from student colleagues not only serves to improve the work, but also provides opportunities for meta-learning (quality criteria, different lines of argument, questioning results, conclusions, arguments or procedures of others, conventions of scientific work). I have co-published a textbook on Agro-Food Studies, which is much appreciated by students, as a comment from the student survey shows: "It was certainly one of the most formative lectures in my Bachelor's degree; I took Agro-Food Studies with Prof. Penker at the time, and I could really learn a lot from it since her book of the same name was the learning material. This book still fascinates me today."

Co-teaching in interdisciplinary PhD seminars: Due to my inter- and transdisciplinary research interests, I have always felt very much "at home" in cross-departmentally organised doctoral schools, such as the Doctoral School Sustainable Development (2007–2017), Doctoral School Transition to Sustainability (2018–) or the Doctoral School Social Ecology (2021–). Together with natural scientists and engineers, we developed two new co-teaching classes with a focus on inter- and transdisciplinary methods and theory. The students and (perhaps most of all) myself and other faculty members benefit from insights into different research paradigms, terminological and conceptual discussions, and the identification of theory-practice gaps or research needs.

PhD supervision: Besides supervising Bachelor's and Master's theses, I have also (co-)supervised doctoral students at BOKU (on-going dissertation projects are in italics):

Teaching and curricula development: I am a member of the BOKU Senate's Study Commission, which has the strategic responsibility for the development of teaching at BOKU. The commission's tasks include, for example, issuing curricula and their amendments, developing guidelines for BOKU study programmes, initiating and supporting the development of new study programmes, and advising the Senate on study matters. I have been a member of the working group that finalised the curriculum for the new German-language continuing education programme "The UN Agenda 2030: Shaping Change Sustainably", which was co-developed by the Private University of Education, Diocese Linz and BOKU for the target group of teachers and municipal employees.

Evaluation (data provided by BOKU for personal evaluation 2022): BOKU students can evaluate courses on a scale from 1 (= very good) to 5 (= insufficient). Due to my frequent co-teaching with colleagues, it is difficult to disentangle individual from collective feedback for most of my courses. Therefore, I was very pleased with the student survey that was made available to me as an individual teacher as part of my individual evaluation in 2022 (see addendum). Together with the very positive quantitative results, these statements provide a very reassuring feedback on my overall teaching strategy:

- "One of the absolutely best professors I've had in my entire time at BOKU."
- "Ms Penker's explanations 'opened my eyes' in many respects while also opening up completely new perspectives which I remember and will reflect on again and again throughout my entire life."
- "Teaching like straight of a (pedagogical or didactic) textbook"
- "She is also the first teacher I know who had the courage to use truly innovative digital tools." "already in the winter semester before COVID-19"
- "It's fun to attend seminars with Prof. Penker. There are also very few professors at BOKU who (also) work in the social sciences, which makes Prof. Penker's teaching all the more valuable!"
- "Univ. Prof. Marianne Penker is among the most innovative and inspiring lecturers in my Master's programme."
- "Marianne Penker's lectures are recommended among students again and again."
- "Prof. Marianne Penker was the first person to give me access to science (after already several years of academic studies)."

5. Interaction with society and scientific community services

Beyond my transdisciplinary research, I have interacted with several stakeholders at the science-society and science-policy interface. For example, I was part of the Austrian Climate Council and shared scientific insights at diverse events, on TV (ORF) and radio (Ö1) (see sections 5.1 and 5.2). I shared scientific findings with members of the European and Austrian parliaments and interacted with various stakeholders from the administration in Austria and beyond (section 5.3). I was the coordinating lead author of the food chapters in two APCC state-of-knowledge reports (Land Use, Climate Friendly Living) and co-organised a number of conferences (see section 5.4. on scientific community services) and participated in diverse trainings (section 5.5).
