

Tim de Ridder is Comsol's Head of Social and Environmental Sustainability, he is a sustainability specialist adept in the intricacies of circular economy principles, zero-waste methodologies, sustainable development goals, carbon markets, community advancement and social transformation. Tim has proven experience in fostering business and project expansion, including amplifying market presence, complemented by a comprehensive skill set in education, stakeholder engagement, and dynamic marketing strategies.

George Asiimwe holds a master's degree in urban development and a bachelor's in environmental science. He has extensive policy and technical experience working in Africa and Asia on various environmental issues. He is currently the Lead for Waste Management at the Global Green Growth Institute (GGGI) Lao PDR country program.

Thipsavanh Souliyavong holds a bachelor's degree in applied economics. She currently serves as an individual consultant for waste management at the Global Green Growth Institute (GGGI) in the Lao PDR, where she engages with and supports teams studying e-waste management in Laos.