Maria Hellström Reimer is a visual artist and professor in design theory at Malmö University, School of Arts and Communication. She has a broad experience of inter-disciplinary research within the fields of architectural theory, aesthetics and urbanism. Recent research includes the project 'Land Use Poetics' - an international initiative on spatial practices, technologies and imaginaries. As the director of studies at the Swedish Faculty for Design Research at the Royal College of Technology, Stockholm and a member of the Swedish Research Council's Committee for Artistic Research, Hellström Reimer is also engaged in questions of research education and interdisciplinarity, especially the development of arts-based methods of inquiry and collaboration. Currently she is visiting professor at the Institute of Landscape Architecture at BOKU/Vienna.
